In September, Columbus Square Bowling Palace will celebrate their 30th year in business with anniversary specials to mark the opening of the 64 lane center in 1983.

John Carlson, General Manager at the Palace for the past 19 years, said he is pleased with the positive response from customers over the years. "We've heard a lot of positive comments about the enhancements we've made to the Palace in the past couple of years and our efforts to establish our facility as mainstream and a leader in bowling centers in Columbus and in the state of Ohio," said Carlson.

"We're proud of the long-term relationships we have established with our patrons over the years; many have been with us since we opened 30 years ago and we hope they remain our customers for the next 30 years."

The Palace was conceived and built as one of the finest bowling and recreational centers in the world. Plush and expensive finishes include club-style padded furnishings, carpeted wall murals, plants, skylights, and features seldom seen in average bowling centers.
